POWER PRACTICING

with

The Harry Watters Quartet

JAZZ INSPIRED TEACHING STRATEGIES FOR CROSS-GENRE SUCCESS

- The lifelong commitment to curiosity & musical excellence: to the compulsives go the spoils
- Leading by example: “you’re already their hero”
  - leverage that influence even further
  - your early morning office warm-ups can raise the bar for everyone
  - a school program filled with highly motivated practicers makes your job easier
- Bravery 101: EVERYONE can improvise
  - it all starts with the melody
  - instruments optional: vocal call and response
  - the jazz mindset can improve expectations and standards for all ensembles
- Thinking like a jazz musician
  - curiosity is more important than talent
  - “if you can sing it, you can play it”
  - the horn as a natural extension of the body
- Too many distractions: flipping the switch of “instant” concentration
  - the focus of a jazz soloist
  - cutting through the environmental and emotional red tape
  - let’s take a journey together
- Mastering the “art” of practicing
  - demonstrate through your own actions that this marathon never ends
  - delving deep into the zone of productivity
  - one of the few things in life your students can actually control
- Our digital age
  - what have we lost and how can we adapt?
  - we’ve become a nation of fidgeters
  - smartphones are wonderful...until they’re not
  - make this new technology work FOR your students in the practice room
- Micro-sessions
  - the best way to stay productive
  - personalize that practice diary
  - moving ahead with relaxed urgency

- The world is our practice room
  - location
  - location
  - location

- Passive listening is a sin
  - “I can learn something from elevator music?”
  - layered data input
  - the crossword puzzle approach
  - ear training throughout your rehearsals

- The note game...developing relative pitch with “virtual instruments”
  - an acquired necessary skill
  - remember the sound and feel of that Concert Bb

- Visualization: limiting those performance/audition surprises
  - repertoire
  - venue
  - audience
  - time of day
  - attire
  - temperature
  - altitude

- RESULTS: a creative band culture without barriers
  - daily improvement and more enjoyment
  - positive musical contributions to the section and the large ensemble
  - encouraging our students to shoot for the moon
